Introduction

Already with 40 years of age the first complaints due to degenerative diseases can become noticeable.

Without RNA, that is present in every living cell, no life would exist. Triggers for wear and ageing processes is the loss of the body's own ribonucleic acids (RNA). Thus the tissue loses its regeneration ability. Chronic and degenerative diseases with disturbed cellular metabolism can be treated with the favourable influence of the ribonucleic acids on the protein biosynthesis and on further important metabolic processes within the area of the immune system, the hormonal system, as well as with the development of the body's own nucleic acids.

Therapy concept

Over forty years ago, the German Professor Dr. Dyckerhoff researched and developed a therapy with active ribonucleic acids, called Regeneresen®, that stimulate the regeneration of damaged cells. His research and many years of practical experience indicate that after a series of these injections, patients report an increase in strength and vitality, and in many cases a restoration of normal function of organs or the regeneration of degenerated tissue, This seems especially true for diseases associated with the ageing process.

RNA Regeneresen® Therapy is an advanced form of cell therapy using only the biological RNA (Ribonucleic acids) without any other cell parts to repair or replace damaged or destroyed cells in the human body.

More than 40 different types of organ-specific ribonucleic acids from cattle and ribonucleic acids from yeast form the basis of the therapeutic concept. The application of this active RNA is a good means for prophylaxis, for both adjuvant and alternative treatment, and it is often useful where other preceding therapies have failed.

Often the concerned organs or organ systems are already reduced in their regeneration ability or they are too much degenerated to respond to prevailing therapies. By the application of organ-specific RNA, the regeneration system in the cells often succeeds to (re)activate or to normalize.

In the sense of integrated therapy, RNA injections can be combined without problem with other methods of treatment. Pharmacological and toxicological studies as well as the clinical experiences for some decades acknowledged the effectiveness and the safety of Regeneresen®. RNA Regeneresen® is prepared in Europe under strict controls. No toxicity is ascertainable. More than 20 million injections have been given worldwide with no reported unwanted side-effects.

This proven security of the Regeneresen® allows also the continuous treatment if necessary for individual reasons.

Legal notice

For some decades Regeneresen (active RNA therapy) is being administered in natural and alternative medicine with positive experiences, though this therapy is viewed sceptically or rejected by conventional academic medicine, and is in common view not regarded as being proven scientifically.

Conclusion

Active RNA is of great therapeutic value. It is the most natural way to treat all those illnesses which are caused by ageing, degeneration and stress.

It is a simple, safe and effective naturopathic method, stimulating the self-healing capacity of the organism.

The exact diagnosis and an early beginning of treatment are prerequisites for a successful therapy.

Active RNA is given according to an individual therapy plan, that is worked out from the patient's history and the releasing causes.
